Dear ICRS Parents and Friends,
IN THE SPOTLIGHT

Welcome back, 7th grade.

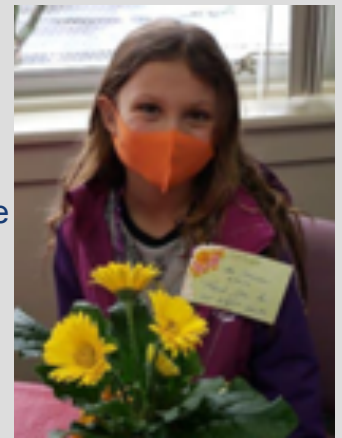

We look forward to all 8th graders being back next week.

A Prayer for Words (from a 7th grader)

Thank you, sweet Poet, for words. They encompass our lives, and they define us. They guide us and soothe us, and we can use them to sway and soften others. You gave us the ability to use words, to swirl and slide them through our throat and our lips. They twist and tumble from our mouths like tendrils of a vine, and they bring change to the world. Your words, O' Poet, have more power than anything else. Words end wars, cease conflicts, caress loved ones. With words, we can rule our own worlds better than force ever can. Words twist and struggle to escape from our mouths, then they spiral into the air and bring change. Words can lift us up, help us rise up, rise to the occasion, rise to rebellion. With words, we can live. Laugh. Lead. Love. Listen. Words are the beginning of our civilization, and words are something every person can use and connect with. Words do not have to make sound. They can be a small glance, a smile, a touch. Words are everywhere, from the rustling of the trees to the babbling of brooks and birds. We can learn from each other with our words, and teach each other new words. Words are traded and teeming with tenderness. You, O' Poet, gave us the power of words, and I, sweet Poet, return to you your words.

~ Zora

Meet Principal Eloise. She joined me on Tuesday, Feb 16 as Principal for the Day. She and a friend enjoyed lunch in the Principal's office. Principal Eloise picked her favorite meal from her favorite local restaurant. We visited classrooms and left notes of appreciation and chocolate for each teacher. She made two executive decisions. Her first grade class got free dress today and got an extra recess. Principal Eloise was a great help in the office today. (Look for Principal for a Day at the auction.)
